After an exhaustive argument in which the character of Fisk and the witnesses for prosecution were severely ex coriated, Mr. Tremaine closed his effort message recommends a change in the city government so as to render the chief magistrate the responsible head of all the departments. The message reverts to the recent municipal revolutions, and the benefit it has conferred on the city in the was suppressed by the Judge. After re-cess, Beach commenced his reply for the prosecution, and spoke for several hours; he reviewed at length the testimony interest of the whole people of the city, and not for the benefit of any class or Party.

The Sheriff's officer at the Court of the State and city extend to them their of the grace of the State and city extend to them their of the circumstances of the murder he of the principal witnesses and called upon commented upon with severity, and also, on the question of premeditation being submitted to the jury on the broad prin-ciple, whether at the moment of firing the latal shot the prisoner intended to kill.
When Mr. Beach had concluded the Judge at once proceeded to deliver his charge. After complimenting the jury, counsel and press for abstaining from criticisms in the case, he charged that all questions were to be discarded which bore upon the character and habits or social standing of the difference between Thiers and the ither the deceased or the prisoner. tilling being principally conceded, the question was whether killing was crime. It was agreed on both sides that killing was either murder in the first degree, manslaughter in the third degree or jus-tified homicide To determine the point at issue, it was important to consider whether two pistols were found, and whether the prisoner was acting in self defense. He then explained the theory of the prosecution of guilt. If the jury believed the prisoner fired from a meditated design to kill without danger, they should find a verdict of murder in the first degree, uness they found a verdict of manslaughtin the third degree. He intimated that the jury might consider an-other theory, that the pistol found by the lad was dropped by the prisoner, though this theory was irreconcilable with the testimony, no one seeing the pis-tol in Fisk's hands except the prisoner. The silence of the prisoner when arrested The silence of the prisoner when arrested id not necessarily involve apprehension.

On that point only, whether the deceased was personally a violent and dangerous man or not, were they to consider his character. It was the duty of the prisoner to satisfy them that the killing was ot murder. His Honor here explained the kind of loubt to which the prisoner would be entitled, and in conclusion said: It would be a great misfortune if the jury now disagree. Ordinarily twelve honest men o, after consideration, make up their do, after consideration, make up their minds and agree. Where passion, prejudice, obstinacy, or other motives are present, they do not. He made these remarks because the jury on the former trial disagreed. The prisoner was either guilty and should be convicted, or innocent and should be acquitted. His Honor did not anticipate a disagreement in this case.

The jury, after being out some few saved.

shown by a recent article in Lippincott's Magazine. It is found that young men from fifteen to twenty years of age marry young women averaging two or three years older than themselves; but if they delay marrage until they are twenty to twenty-five years old, their spouses average a year younger than themselves; and thenceforward this difference steadly increases, till in extreme old age on the bridegroom's part it is apt to be enormous. The inclination of octogenarians to wed misses in their teens is an everyday occurrence, but it is amusing to find statistics bear out the satires of Thackeray and Balzac. Again, the husband of young women aged twenty and under average a little above twenty-five years, and the inequality of age diminishes thencefor ward, till for women who have reached thirty the respective ages are equal; after thirty-five years, women, like man, marry those younger than themselves, the disproportion increasing with age, till at fifty-five it averages nine years.
